

Acknowledgments

Many stimulating discussions with the late Ras Kabadda Tesfaye of Trinidad widened my horizons about the history and politics of the African diaspora, and I would like to thank the staff of St Paul's Advice Centre (Albert Villa) and members of its Management Committee for their generous leaving present, a flight to Trinidad. During that first visit to the West Indies, back in 1991, I became interested in the people who once lived and worked on sugar plantations.

I would never have started this venture had it not been for my husband's encouragement, and I am grateful for all the support David has given me: patiently living with me in the eighteenth century, sharing his research notes and, in the early days, computer access. Our trips to record offices and archives were always good days out. While I was researching my project, David pursued his own Mountravers and Nevis-related interests.

Our research in the West Indies would not have been possible without the assistance from those who provided us with places to stay and with 'wheels'. Our thanks go to Suzanne Gordon of Nevis, Anne Hersh of Nevis and New York, the late Vince Hubbard of Nevis, Arpad and Judith Kovacsy of Virginia and Nevis, the late Bill Pinney of St Kitts and Nevis, and David and his late wife Nancy Rollinson of Nevis, Nova Scotia, Canada and now of Wales, Great Britain.

In Ghana we were made welcome and comfortable by Revd Agyenim Boateng and the staff at the Cocoa Research Institute guest houses in Accra and in Tafo, and we would like to thank everyone for their hospitality.

During the early stages of my project I received much encouragement from Professor David Hancock of the University of Michigan ('Think big!'), Professor Mark Horton and Professor Madge Dresser of the universities of Bristol and the West of England, and from the late Professor Mary Beaudrey of the University of Boston. I would like to take this opportunity to thank them all for spurring me on.

The late Brian Littlewood of Rhayader, Powys, selflessly shared his research and numerous resources - too many to mention individually - and saved us many a trip to distant archives and record offices and, most importantly, the repositories which hold the different collections of papers relating to the Stapleton plantations in St Kitts and Nevis. For several years Brian had energetically supported our projects and deserves a very, very special mention. This study would have been much the poorer without his additional material.

Others have also kindly supplied me with books and articles, and I wish to express my gratitude to the late Professor Mary Beaudrey of Boston University for an article from Gastronomica, The Journal of Food and Culture and a copy of Michelle M Terrell's book, The Jewish Community of Early Colonial Nevis; to Diana Fox for a copy of the invaluable diary written by her forebear Henry Ransford; to Sheila Hardy for a copy of her book, Frances, Lady Nelson; to the late Vince Hubbard for a copy of his book Sword, Ships and Sugar, for RN Buckley's The British Army in the West Indies and for his research notes from the Beinicke Collection at Hamilton College Library, Clinton, NY; to the late Bill Pinney for copies of his manuscripts on the history of Mountravers and the Pinney family; to Stephen Price, the former Head of Museums & Art Gallery, Bristol, for interesting references he had spotted in Paupers and Pig Killers; to Margaret Stacey of Uppingham for copies of Revd John Bell's letters and her publication Mary Drake and the Missionary (Uppingham Methodist Church Council 2010); to George Tyson of St Croix for the story of Peter Hanly, for copies of The Kamina Folk and of Linebaugh and Radiker's book, The Many-Headed Hydra; and to Joseph S Woodley of Harlow, Essex for a copy of the original Cayon Diary.

Staff at archives and record offices have always been most obliging and helpful. In particular I would like to thank Michael Richardson, the late Hannah Lowerey and Megan Cox at Bristol University Special Collections for their assistance and their many kindnesses. Keeping our personal comfy cushions clearly went beyond the call of duty. Others who deserve a mention are the staff at the archives and record offices of Berkshire, Bristol, Devon, Dorset, Gloucestershire, and Somerset, as well as The National Archives at Kew; Lorraine Hanley and Gail Dore at the archive of the Nevis Historical and Conservation Society; staff in the Supreme Court Registry in the Nevis Court House in Charlestown - the Executive Director, Mrs Daniel, and Anthony Walters, John Arthurton, and Olinda Walters – and the late Victoria Borg-O'Flaherty at the St Christopher National Archive; Revd Franklyn Roberts in the office of the Methodist Chapel, Charlestown; Patricia Denney at the archive of the Society of Merchant Venturers, Bristol; and Lucy McCann at the Bodleian Library of Commonwealth and African Studies at Rhodes House, Oxford.

For responding to written requests, I would like to extend my warm thanks to the following archivists: Martin Cherry at the Library and Museum of Freemasonry, London; Allison Heinbaugh at the John D Rockefeller Library, Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, Williamsburg, Virginia; Patrick Kerwin at the Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress, Washington, DC; Janie C Morris at Duke University, Durham, North Carolina; Theresa Regnier at the Western Libraries, London, Ontario, Canada; Wendy Thirkettle at the Manx National Heritage Library, Isle of Man; and Brian York, the archivist for the papers of the British and Foreign School Society at Brunel University.

In the course of the research I have sought information from many individuals and organisations, and I would like to thank the following for scouring their records, research notes, or their memory. My thanks go to Matt Ainslie of Philadelphia for information on Mrs Graydon and her boarding house; Sandy Bagnall of Harlow for additional information on the Slater family; Fred Bailey of the Hungerford Historical Association for searching his records for information about the Richens family; Richard Bryant of the Lindfield History Project Group for his notes on Francis Smith; Roy Chapple and the Chairman of the Colyton Parish History Society, John Cochrane, for additional Scarborough and Impey information; Frances Coakley, editor of the Manx Notebook website, for information about the Isle of Man; Revd Cummins of Mallow, County Cork, for replying to my query about the Bunworth family; Jane Evans of Tiverton for information on Rockstowes House, Uley; the late James Gibb, President of the Sherborne Museum Association, for perusing his records for information on Simon Pretor; Lilian Gill, Administrator at St James's church, Taunton, and Jennifer Wakefield, for following up Coker references; Eve Higgs of Thorncombe for pointers regarding Harlescombe Farm; Roger Jaques of Bristol for answering my query about the Jacques family; Richard Kennedy-Moffat of Hawera, New Zealand, for additional information on a branch of his ancestors, the Weekes family; Hazel Lake of Harlow for additional Parsons and Woodley information; Geoffrey Leake of Worcester for information on the Arthurton family; the late Pam Lemmey of Halstock for information on the Mercers and for finding the reference to Joseph Gill's time in the lunatic asylum, and to Yvonne Stephenson and Jennifer Smith of Halstock for their interest in Joseph Gill and for following up references; Raymond Allan Lescott of Llanfyllin, Powys, for information about John Macdonald; Howard J Mais of Leeds for information on his forebear, Captain Charles Maies; Dr John Parker of the School of Oriental and African Studies, London, for sharing his then unpublished article on death and burials in the Accra region; the late Albert Powell of Nevis for his memories of living at Mountravers; Ann Rainsbury, Curator at Chepstow Museum, for information on Nathaniel Wells and the Taylor family; David Robinson and the late Joan Robinson of Nevis for information on the island's flora and fauna; Dr Michelle Terrell of the Two Pines Resource Group in Shafer, Minnesota, for references to a property in Charlestown, the Cedar Trees.

In addition, I am indebted to Dr David Barker, formerly Keeper of Archaeology at The Potteries Museum, Stoke-on-Trent, for his identification of European-made pottery shards and other material found at Mountravers, and to Dr Elaine Morris and her team at the Department of Archaeology at the University of Southampton for analysing colonoware shards and glass, clay pipe, metal and bone assemblages. Their expert examinations of the artefacts provide brief glimpses into the material culture at Mountravers.

My warm thanks also go to Terry Sancroft Baker for additional information on the Baker, Bucke and Collins families; to Michael Beesley, Dr Michael McCaldin and Dr Pamela Sharpe, for scrutinising additional references in the archives in Nevis; to Revd Agyenyim Boateng for help with Ghanaian names, to 'Bonnie', whose father Ken Joseph was a stonemason and worked on the Pinneys estate, for getting in touch; to Dr Michael Costen and Julian Evans for helpful advice about publishing; to the independent researcher Christien Luis Dimas of NYC for additional information about the Archbald brothers; to Frank Goodwill for his useful St Kitts and Nevis website; to Pam Huggins of Nevis for photos; to the late Vince Hubbard for his knowledgeable guidance on expeditions to ruined plantations and stimulating discussions over many a good meal; to Mathew Kidwell for additional information on Amelia Brodbelt's descendants; to Dr Alice Kinghorn for making available her resources on Anglican missionaries; to Bernard Lane for his advice and encouragement; to Martha Mayo, former Director of the Center for Lowell History at the University of Massachusetts Lowell, for bringing John Levy's autobiography to my attention; to Sue and David Morris for making me welcome at their home, Woodcuts Manor; to Michael and Annette Scanlan for taking photographs of the Smith tomb in Richmond, Tasmania; to Tim Taylor, the producer of Time Team, for taking up our proposal to dig at Mountravers, and to the members and crew of Time Team for their help and professionalism; to the late John Tobin and his wife Barbara for their interest and kind hospitality; to George Tyson for taking notes in the Rigsarkivet in Copenhagen, Denmark; to the Department of Archaeology and Anthropology at the University of Bristol and the NHCS for the loan of surveying equipment; to the Wade family of Nevis and Detroit for providing a map of the Mountravers estate; to Christopher Wakling for stylistic suggestions and positive comments, and to Joseph 'Charlie' Woodley of Westbury, Nevis, for interesting forays into the bush.

And I am very much indebted to those committed volunteer transcribers at archives and record offices who often remain unacknowledged. In hand lists and on websites they make data available that could otherwise only be accessed with great difficulty or expense. Thank you all!

Last, but not least, I gratefully acknowledge The Pinney Trust for permission to quote from the Pinney Papers and Ms Claudette Jenkins, the Supreme Court Registrar, for permission to quote from the records in the Supreme Court Registry in the Nevis Court House in Charlestown.

All these willing individuals have helped me greatly but if errors of fact or judgment have crept into the text, these are mine alone.

Christine Eickelmann
Malmesbury, Wiltshire, UK
February 2025

To read other chapters, please copy this link and paste it into your search engine:
<https://seis.bristol.ac.uk/~emceee/mountraversplantationcommunity.html>